

TARIFF PICTURES.

Not cotton with the $25,000,000 worth of cotton manufactures which enter the country last year to take work away from American labor, the "reformers" propose to reduce the tariff more than one-half, which reduction, they estimate, will increase importations of cotton manufactures to $50,000,000.

This is the free-trade way of caring for the workman.

READ NEWS FOR SABATHARIANS.

Chicago Dispatch.—Very international exposition held in this country henceforth will be open on Sunday. Mark that.

READ NEWS FOR SABATHARIANS.

Owensboro Messenger.—The Covington Commonwealth finds much in Congressman Berry to criticize. That is the impression a good many people have of him. He seems to be more like a Cincinnati ward politician than a Kentucky statesman.

A H—AND V—TIME.

Frankfort Capital.—It has been a halcyon and a victorious time in Frankfort for the past thirty-six hours. Every man in town is nine feet high, and weighs a ton, while the small boy, with his fireworks, is, unfortunately, not out of sight.

FAIR OPEN ON SUNDAY.

Louisville Times.—Now what are Dr. Eaton and the other Sabatharians. Partisan and Cavalier, look to do about it! Just as there are injunctions that do not enjoin, so there are boycotts that do not bully. The Fair is now wide open seven days in the week and will so remain.

PASSING THE HAT SUNDAYS.

Covington Commonwealth.—It is urged that the irreligious feeling of Sunday opening of the Fair is the admission fee. This does give it something of a commercial flavor, but when you come to think of it it is merely the dropping of a mite into the contribution box by each worshiper in this temple of wonders, exemplification of the grand development of the many talents God has given to man.

CHADDOCKIANA—CHICAGOIANA.

Paris Kentuckyian Gitten.—"Look out for counterfeits!" We don't, but they do. A half dollar for a lunch soon after we had received it, saying, "This appears counterfeit." "Yes, a very base one," added the cashier, but the collector on car offered us 25 cents for it, but another more honest collector on same train admitted he had given it to us and refunded good money.

BRING THEM UP TO STANDARD.

Missouri Sentinel.—Thomas B. Reed, Bourke Cockran and several other Congressmen will make an effort this autumn to have all desks removed from the House of Representatives. The object of this change is to take away all distraction from the members, and to confine them to a choice between attending and reflecting. It is thought that the average Congressman will choose the first term of this alternative.

DEPORTATION A FAILURE.

Atlanta Constitution.—For about forty years negroes have been going from this country to Liberia. They have met nothing but disaster. They are not fitted to stand the climate of the West coast of Africa. Long residence in America has made the blacks unable to stand the climate of the dark continent. The negroes who have survived the fever in Liberia have lapsed into the low morality and ferocity of the natives.

THE BICYCLE BREAKING UP CHURCHES.

Commercial Gazette.—Clergymen in England have discovered another enemy to church going. It is the bicycle. Even English clergymen are fascinated with the wheel. If the bicycle is not scotched, there will be not only empty pews, but empty pulpits in England's churches. The bicycle is a deterrent to churchgoers, is something more, but that it is powerful is proven by the fact that it is British clerical papers from suffering Pastors.

THE SAFE PARTY.

M. Halstead.—Whatever may be the faults in Republican platforms, or the weaving of those most conspicuous and foremost, whether leaders or not, or the frightful blundering in sacrificing essentials for non-essentials, the history of the Republican party is a great and safe platform, the greatest and safest there is, and it is a rule that should rarely, if ever, be broken, to vote the straight Republican ticket, for the Democratic party has a hardened habit of being in the wrong. The country is suffering because the Republicans did not during the Harrison Administration simplify the issues and stick to business instead of expending force in flapping about sentiment. We need the simplification of business politics. With it we shall speedily win, without it we shall go on failing.

MAYSVILLE, KY., THURSDAY, JUNE 22, 1893.

Rev. L. H. TIPTON has been granted a license to perform the marriage ceremony by the County Court, with T. J. Johnson as surety.

Mr. SMITH, whose name appeared in yesterday's Ledger, is agent for the Western and Southern Insurance Company and not the Sun as stated.

That home of sensations, Catlettsburg, is all torn up again over the discovery that a J. L. Jackson, a man who came there with a wife and children, has more than his share of wiles. The man, with wife No. 1, and a figure in the society of the town and the appearance of Mrs. Jackson No. 2, is rolled as a swart morel under the tongues of the gossipers.

Under Difficulties. Clift C. Burton and Miss Florence Herron of Covington, whose marriage in this city on Tuesday was announced in THE LEDGER yesterday, experienced some difficulty in obtaining a license.

They slipped away from their home in Covington, intending to run up here, get married and go back home with no one the wiser. Never having been married before, they overlooked the fact that the young lady held of the proper age—21 years.

Miss Herron was but 20, and County Clerk Pearce refused a license.

The young lady's mother was telegraphed, and after a wait of two hours an answer was received, giving parental consent. By this time it was too late to catch the evening West-bound train. So as Judge Plaster pronounced the two wedding bells, the train was heard rumbling down Front street.

After another long wait, Mr. and Mrs. Burton left the city by steamer.

POPE LEO.

The Holy Father's Letter on the School Question.

Public Schools Not to Be Entirely Condemned.

His Love for America Declared—Strong Eulogy of Mary, Mother and a Further Explanation of the Two-fold Purpose of His Mission Here.

BALTIMORE, June 22.—Cardinal Gibbons has given the press the official translation of the much-discussed encyclical letter from the pope on the school question. It shows the pope's love for America; endorses Mr. Sallio; gives the two-fold purpose of his mission; his position on the school question explained to the archbishops in New York, misunderstood by others, endorsed by the pope, who declares it to be in harmony with the council of Baltimore, which remains in its integrity. The correspondence follows:

Official translation of the encyclical letter from the pope on the school question. I do not doubt but that your eminence will be pleased to receive the letter, and I hope that the important document will see calm re-establishment in the minds of all who have been interested in this question. It is the desire of the holy father that your eminence would kindly have the letter printed and distributed to all the bishops of the United States, and that you remain with profound respect your eminence's devoted servant.

H. CARDINAL BOMPOLA.

Rome, June 1, 1903.

To His Eminence, James Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore.

Official translation of the encyclical letter on the school question in the United States.

To Our Beloved Son, James Gibbons, Cardinal, Primate of the Holy Roman Church, Primate of St. Mary's Beyond the River, Archbishop of Baltimore, and to Our Beloved Sons, the Archbishops and Bishops of the United States of North America, Pope Leo XIII. Salutem et venerabilem benedictionem. Amen.

We have often given manifest proofs both of our solicitude for the welfare of the faithful people and bishops of the United States of America and of the peculiar affection with which we cherish that portion of our Savior's flock. Of this we have given an additional and unmistakable evidence in sending to you as our delegate, our venerable brother Francis, titular archbishop of Lepanto, and illustrious man, less pre-occupied by his learning than by his virtues as a statesman, in the recent meeting of the archbishops in New York, have plainly testified, thus confirming the trust which we had reposed in his prudence.

Now his legation has this for its first object that it should be a public testimonial of our affection for you and your country and of the high esteem in which we hold those who administer the government of the republic for the aid they have given to the cause of the universal exposition held in the city of Chicago in which we ourselves, by the courteous invitation of its directors, have taken part.

But his legation had this also for its purpose that our presence should be made, as it were, perpetuating in you the permanent establishment of an apostolic delegation at Washington. By this we have manifestly declared not only that we were proud to have equally with those most flourishing countries to which we have been accustomed to send representatives welcomed to our audience, but also that we were, with our archbishops and bishops, vehemently desire that the bonds of mutual relationship binding you and your faithful people with us as a church with their father, should grow closer every day. Now was it a small comfort to our heart that this new act of our care in your regard was followed by a general expression of thanks and affection toward us.

Now, in our fraternal solicitude for your well being we had above all given command to the archbishop of Lepanto that he should use all his endeavors and all the skill of his fraternal charity for the extraction of the pernicious elements of dimension developed in the too well-known controversies concerning the proper instruction of Catholic youth; a dimension whose name was defined by various writings published on both sides; those commands of ours our venerable brother fully complied with, and the month of November of last year he repaired to New York, where there had assembled with you, beloved son, all the other archbishops of your country, they having complied with the desire which I had communicated to them through the sacred congregation of the propaganda, that after conferring with the suffragans, they should join amicable and deliberate concerning the best method of caring for those Catholic children who attend the public schools instead of Catholic schools.

THEIR ORDER OF PRECEDENCE.

How the English Aristocracy Takes Rank from Duke to Esquire.

It sometimes happens that in writing of the English nobility you are not quite familiar with their subject, and make mistakes concerning the different degrees or degrees in the peerage. Perhaps a simple explanation of the matter may be found useful in clearing up loose conceptions.

The highest—though not the oldest rank in Britain, however, is that of duke. The first dukedom created was the dukedom of Cornwall, bestowed on Edward, the Black Prince, and it is now appertains, as a matter of right, from the moment of his birth, to the eldest son of the reigning monarch. The formal manner of addressing a duke is "Your Grace," as it is technically called—"his grace, the duke of so-and-so." A duke is the only nobleman whom it is allowable in conversation to address by the name of his rank, as, for instance, "I was remarking, duke." Next to a duke comes a marquis, or marquess, as the word is more now usually spelled. The word means lord of the marches or borders.

A marquess is addressed as "the most noble the marquess," etc. The next degree below a marquess is an earl. It is a distinctive English term, its equivalent abroad being count, although in some cases, as earl of Arundel, the name of the earl is known as a countess. An earl is addressed as "the right honorable, the earl of," etc. After the earl comes a viscount, or viscountess, as the word is now usually spelled. The name bears its own origin origin on its face, and was formerly applied to a person who acted as sheriff of a county in the place of the count or earl. Like the earl he is addressed as "the right honorable, the viscount," etc. The lowest rank in the British peerage is that of baron, although in one sense of the word every peer is a baron. This arises from the fact that, according to the old feudal law, every man possessed certain lands, lands called a baron, and as a condition of his possessing them had to bring into the field a certain number of armed men at the call of the sovereign. Below the peerage are the baronets, knights and esquires. The latter title is now applied promiscuously; but in former times there are only two classes of the queen's subjects entitled to this ancient and honorable appellation. These are sons of peers, and the eldest sons of the peerage, and the eldest sons of knights and their eldest sons; gentlemen specially created esquires by the queen; esquires of knights of the bath; justices of the peace, and others with similar ex-officio title and baronets.

NOT AN EXPERT AT KNITTING.

Queen Victoria's Effort Around the Continent of the Highland Woman.

It was back in the sixties, and the queen was staying with the first wife of the late duke of Sutherland at Dunrobin castle, when one day, as related by the London Society, she took a morning walk, attended by only one of her ladies. The morning was a delightful one and the ladies soon found themselves nearly four miles from the castle. Coming to a little cottage they saw an old woman knitting stockings by the door and asked her permission to enter and sit down to rest themselves, which was accorded with all the hospitality of the highlands. The old woman, resuming her knitting, began to chat with her son Donald, who had just joined a highland regiment. "I'll be thinking, no, that you are looedies some a' the vray fine Lunnons, my dear," she said, looking at the two milliners. The sovereign nodded assent. "Weel, when he goes back, abins, ye'll see a' the vray fine Lunnons, my dear," she said, looking at the two milliners. The sovereign nodded assent. STRANGE STORY.

Seven Women Meet Death and Robbery.

A Texas Woman Makes Startling Charges Against Her Husband.

His Children Made to Wipe Human Blood From His Clothing. Sister Wanner—The Information Regarding as Deserving By the Chief of Police.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 22.—A letter, containing startling information, which has at once perplexed the police authorities, has been received by John Wanner, a butcher shop keeper, of Louisville, from his sister, Mrs. Magdalena Wanner, of Big Springs, a small town near Austin, Tex.

Influenced by letters from his brother-in-law, Paul Wanner, about the ease and rapidly with which money could be made in Texas, Wanner has sold out his business here and intended to go to Texas in a few days, taking with him an unmarried sister, who possesses a neat sum in ready money. Wednesday morning, however, a letter came from his sister that chilled the blood in his veins.

Mrs. Wanner begged that her brother would never show the letter, as her husband would kill her if he found out that she had written to him. She then stated that her husband was the leader of a band of assassins called the Black Agents, who operate in Travis county, and had long been a terror to the peaceful residents. They had made several trips to Austin and had chloroformed seven women and murdered them. Then they robbed the homes, and at this time some of the booty was stored in their home. These were only a few of the murders they had committed. They were sworn by oath to murder any one who betrayed them. In the role of a quiet farmer she said her husband was able to kill a man with a bloody word and was never suspected by his neighbors.

She wrote further that when her husband learned that Wanner and his sister were coming, he sent for another member of the gang, and while she was in another room with her children, they deliberately laid a plan to murder and rob them.

The long letter was concluded with: "For God's sake, take sister and go north as possible, and never come back here, as you value your lives. He would kill me if I were to try to leave him. He treats me and my children frightfully, and two or three times the children have had to clean the blood from his clothes when he returned from his murderous excursions."

It was signed: "Your loving sister, Magdalena."

One Taylor, chief of police, has telegraphed the substance of the letter to the chief of police at Austin. He regards the information as deserving of serious consideration, and thinks it possible the law toward clearing up some mysterious murders which have been committed in or near Austin.
